KUFM, the student FM radio station, is planning to move its antenna again. The antenna, erected in front of the Journalism Building in November, will be moved to Big Sky Mountain, 12 miles north of Missoula. The new location will extend the station's coverage to Darby in the south and Kalispell in the north. The move also will alleviate problems caused by the antenna's interference with other electronic equipment on campus.

Student aid awarded

The University of Montana has received $803,031 in student financial aid funds from the federal government—funds expected to provide financial aid to more than 1,200 students during the 1973-74 fiscal year.

President Robert T. Pantzer has announced that the allocation includes $507,068 in work-study funds, $177,633 to be used for national direct student loans and $118,330 in supplemental educational opportunity grants.

The appropriation for the 1973-74 academic year is slightly smaller than the appropriation the University received for the past academic year, according to Don Mullen, financial aid director. Last year's appropriation was $985,884.

A surplus in loan funds and "very good success" in loan repayment should add $200,000 to the money available and raise the total to more than $1 million, he said.

Although the 1973-74 appropriation fell short of what university officials had expected, funding of the various financial aid programs should not be affected measurably, Mullen said.

"It's a little less than anticipated but still enough to give us an adequate program for the upcoming school year," he said.

Mullen said the University would have a work-study program on a level comparable to the 1972-73 academic year, but the 1973 summer work-study program will be limited to those students who were certified for summer work-study and employed before June 30.

"Those students who will be full-time students during the 1973-74 academic year and who are not taking any courses during the summer may continue on work-study up to 40 hours a week," Mullen said.

"Those enrolled for Summer Session may continue employment for no more 20 hours a week for the period of Summer Session."

Under the work-study program, the federal government pays 80 per cent of an eligible student's wages for a part-time job. The college or off-campus agency employing the student pays the remaining 20 per cent. During the past academic year, 759 students were employed on campus, and this summer, 130 students are employed. Ninety five are working on campus and 35 are working in a variety of jobs around the state in city, county, state and federal government.

National direct student loans were given to about 400 students last year. This year's appropriation is $177,633, a cut from last year's appropriation of $231,727. The loans are offered to qualified students at an interest rate of only three per cent.

Grants ranging from $200 to $1,500 are given to qualified students under the supplemental educational opportunity program. The grants do not require work or repayment. Last year, the University's appropriation of $245,197 provided grants for about 400 students.

Eligible and needy UM freshmen also will be able to apply for grants under a new federal basic educational opportunity grant program. Under the program, students will apply for grants directly from the federal government, bypassing the college financial aid offices, he said. Grants awarded will not come out of the federal financial aid appropriation to the University. Full details of the program are expected to be announced soon, Mullen said.

Mullen said the evaluation of students' applications for the coming academic year has begun and the allocation of awards will be made by the end of July.

Mullen also said that the student eligibility guidelines are being revised on a national basis and the changes will affect the allocation of student financial aid.

The financial aid office plans to begin periodic investigations of financial aid applications and employment practices, Mullen said.

"We want a good and honest program," he said, "and we will take steps to assure that the program is participated in honestly."

There had been some question whether the University would receive any financial aid from the federal government for students during the 1973-74 fiscal year because of alleged misuse of federal funds by the athletic department. Until now, the Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had excluded the University from lists of schools receiving federal student financial aid.

Pantzer said results of an audit into the use of federal monies has not been made available yet.

Accreditation confirmed

The University of Montana has received word that the Commission on Higher Schools of the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools has reaffirmed the accreditation of the University following the commission's regular five-year evaluation of the school.

The accreditation was made on the basis of the University's 1973 Interim Report and a visit to the campus during May by James F. Bemis, executive director of the commission.

While in Missoula, Bemis met with students, faculty and administrators to get personal impressions of the University. During his visit, he said the University is "a good solid institution" and is "organized and staffed to accomplish the purpose it seeks to serve."

In a letter notifying Pantzer of the accreditation, Bemis said, "The Commission was generally pleased with the progress that has been made at the University of Montana since the 1968 evaluation.

"This is especially noteworthy since the level of funding at the University has been minimal in recent years. We are indeed hopeful that the level of financial support will improve in the years to come."

The commission is scheduled to conduct a full reevaluation of the University in 1978.

Two UM professional schools, the School of Education and the School of Business Administration, also have received notice of accreditation.

The education school has received full accreditation status from the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), according to Dean J. Francis Rummel.

The school has been accredited since 1957, but was given provisional status in two of its programs following a reevaluation visit during the 1967-68 academic year, Rummel said.

"Those areas needing improvement—the preparation of secondary teachers at the bachelor's and master's degree levels, and school service personnel (guidance counselors) at the doctoral degree level—have since been remedied," he said.

The education school will be reevaluated during the 1976-77 academic year.

The School of Business Administration has received notice of continued accreditation from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), according to Rudyard B. Goode, dean of the business school.

The business school has been accredited by the AACSB since 1949, Goode said, and undergoes a periodic review to insure that high standards are maintained.

The new library will be dedicated during Homecoming activities Oct. 12-13. The books and equipment in the old library will be moved beginning in August.

Activities planned for Homecoming

Dedication of the new University of Montana Library will highlight Homecoming activities on campus Oct. 12-13.

Three floors of the new five-story library building are expected to open Fall Quarter. Earl Thompson, dean of the library, said he hopes books and equipment will be moved to the new library beginning in August.

The first two floors of the building are underground. The ground floor, which is the third floor, will house the main services of the library such as circulation and microfilm. The second floor will contain the humanities and science divisions and the first floor the social sciences and documents divisions.

George Oechsli, executive director of the Alumni Association, said the new library is "the most significant addition to the campus in many years."

He added, "the dedication and the usual reunions, awards and entertainment during Homecoming will round out an interesting and exciting time for all alumni."

Johnny Cash and Show are tentatively scheduled to entertain Friday night, Oct. 12, in the Harry Adams Field House. Ticket information can be obtained by writing Program Council, ASUM, University of Montana, Missoula, Mont. 59801.

The Grizzly football team will meet Idaho State University in a game Saturday, Oct. 13, at Dornblaser Field.

Reunions will be held for the 25th, 35th and 50th-year classes. Members of the classes, 1923, 1938 and 1948, will be notified by mail about reunion plans.

Recipients of the Distinguished Service Award (DSA) will be honored during the activities. The DSA is awarded each year during Homecoming to alumni or former students who have distinguished themselves and brought honor to the University, the state or the nation.

The Board of Directors and the House of Delegates of the Alumni Association will meet during Homecoming.

Alumni College events scheduled

Two well-known University of Montana alumni, Clarence K. Streit and Dorothy Rochon Powers, will be the featured speakers at the first UM Alumni College Aug. 10-12 at Lubrecht Forestry Camp northeast of Missoula.

Streit, president and founder of the International Movement for Atalntic Union, has been nominated four times for the Nobel Peace Prize. He is editor and founder of the magazine, Freedom & Union, and author of "Union Now," which calls for a union of 15 Atlantic democracies established along the lines of the U.S. government.

Streit was graduated from the UM School of Journalism in 1919 and was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the University in 1939. He was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, England, and holds honorary degrees from Oberlin, Colby and Hobart colleges.

Powers, the only woman to receive the Ernie Pyle memorial award for outstanding achievement in journalism, is currently a feature and editorial writer for the Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.

She was cited recently for her journalistic contributions to the field of criminal correction by the Washington Correctional Association.

In 1966, she was defeated in her bid for Congress from the state of Washington.

Discussion during the weekend seminar will center around the theme "Dimensions of Change" and will be led by a group of UM faculty members. Participating professors are: Clancy Gordon, professor of botany and coordinator of environmental studies; Jon Driessen, assistant professor of sociology; Richard Adler, assistant professor of English; Louis Hayes, associate professor and chairman of the political science department, Harry Fritz and David Emmons, both assistant professors of history.

Leading the recreational activities will be Henry Goetz, assistant manager of the Forestry camp; Keith Glaes, director of outdoor recreation, and James Lowe, associate professor of forestry.

The Alumni College is sponsored by the UM Alumni Association and is directed by Deanna Sheriff, assistant for alumni relations. Also included in the activities are a nature hike, river float trip and fishing trips.

"The program is open to all alumni and their spouses. Parents of students and other interested persons also are welcome, space permitting," Sheriff said.

Those interested in attending should send the registration fee to the Alumni Association, University of Montana, Missoula, Mont. 59801. The registration deadline is Aug. 6.

Jeannette Rankin, UM alumna, dies

Jeannette Rankin, a University of Montana alumna and the first woman elected to Congress, died May 18 at the age of 92 in Carmel, Calif.

Ms. Rankin, a Republican congresswoman from Missoula, was the only member of Congress to vote against American involvement in the two world wars. She was one of 56 members who voted against U.S. entry into World War I, and she was the only one opposed to American entry into World War II.

In 1968, she led the Jeannette Rankin Brigade's March on Washington to protest U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war.

She was born on a ranch near Missoula in 1880. She was a social worker in the early 1900s after graduating from the University in 1902.

In 1911 she was elected to the Montana House of Representatives. She successfully ran for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives in 1916.

While in Congress, she was a leader in pushing through the 19th Amendment to the Constitution—giving women the right to vote. She had previously been a leader in getting similar legislation approved in Montana.

Her political career was interrupted after one term when she lost the Republican senatorial nomination to the late Sen. Thomas J. Walsh.

She returned to the House of Representatives in 1940. Her campaign slogan was, "Prepare to the limit for defense; keep our men out of Europe."

Ms. Rankin opposed all wars, for any reason, fought anywhere. She said, "To me, it isn't this war or that war. It's the war system. We've never settled any dispute by fighting."

Ms. Rankin believed the military system created enemies for the nation and became stronger with each passing war.

She worked for 20 years—between terms in the House—to improve conditions for women and children and was active in antiwar movements.

She divided her time between Montana, Georgia and California in her later years. She operated a "cooperative homestead for unemployed homemakers" on her farm in Watkinville, Ga., before moving to a retirement apartment in Carmel, Calif.

One of her last public appearances in Montana was in 1972 during the Constitutional Convention. She gave her ideas for a direct presidential preference election. She said the present system of electing the chief executive is ineffective.

Aber Day: tradition revived

About 2,500 students and faculty took a day off May 16 to revive a 39-year-old tradition at the University of Montana which included a campus cleanup and buffalo feed.

Aber Day, which has not been observed at the University since 1954, was observed for 39 years beginning in 1915. The event honors the late William M. "Daddy" Aber, a University professor from 1895-1919.

Students picked up litter, raked lawns, dug weeds and washed off the bronze grizzly statue at the west end of the Oval.

At noon, President Robert T. Pantzer and Academic Vice President Richard G. Landini carved the roasted buffalo, which was served on the Oval by the food service with corn-on-the-cob and sliced watermelon. The Jazz Workshop provided entertainment.

Although it was not officially part of Aber Day activities, about 4,000 people gathered at Bonner Flats east of Missoula for the second annual library kegger to raise money for the purchase of books for the new library.

Education study begins

The blue-ribbon commission on post-secondary education begins meetings this month to determine the future of higher education in Montana.

The commission, created by the 1973 legislature to conduct an 18-month, $300,000 study of post-secondary education in Montana, will make a report and recommendations to the 1975 session of the Montana legislature.

Ted James, former lieutenant governor from Great Falls, will head the commission.

Thirty commission members, including Garry South, president of the Associated Students of the University of Montana, have been appointed by Gov. Thomas Judge.

Gov. Judge has asked the commission to consider a number of questions, including:

What is required of a state with 700,000 people and a limited tax base in order to provide full educational opportunity? What are the types, nature and number of institutions Montana needs to make possible a respectable post-secondary educational opportunity for our citizens?

What are the most impressive manpower needs of our state, region and nation? Is our post-secondary system meeting those needs? What changes, if any, in curriculum emphasis are required?

What should be the relationship between the post-secondary vocational centers and the state's three community colleges? Where do the six units of the University System fit into the vo-tech picture?

To what extent should planning for publically supported post-secondary units take into account the development plans and capabilities of private institutions within the state?

Should we attempt to maintain high quality programs and faculty at the University of Montana and Montana State University, even at the expense of diminishing the roles of the other units of the University System?

To what extent can the people of the state continue to subsidize intercollegiate athletic programs?

Gov. Judge said he hopes the commission "will strive to go beyond the minimal requirements of the accrediting associations in trying to determine Montana's own minimum standards in post-secondary education."

Templeton dies

James R. Templeton, professor of zoology at the University of Montana, died May 18 in University Hospital, Seattle, Wash.

Templeton, 48, was born Nov. 1, 1924, in Spray, Ore. He received his bachelor's degree in 1950 at Whitman College, Walla Walla, Wash., and was awarded his Ph.D. at the University of Oregon, Eugene, in 1959.

He joined the faculty at the University in September 1964 after serving three years at the University of Texas Dental Branch, Houston. He was a member of the UM chapter of Sigma Xi, national science honorary, and a veteran of World War II.

From 1952-54, Templeton taught at the Umapine, Ore., Grade School, and from 1954-56 he was a science teacher at Banks, Ore., High School. He was a teaching fellow from 1957-59 at the University of Oregon and served as a postdoctoral fellow from 1959-61 at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Students get awards

Two University of Montana students have received the Alumni Award of Excellence.

Donna L. Donahue, Rapid City, S.D., and William Peoples, Butte, were presented the $250 award at the Alumni Association board of directors meeting May 19.

The award is granted each year by the Alumni Association to one female and one male student who have excelled beyond their academic pursuits and whose achievements are a credit to the student body, the University and the state.

Donahue is a 1973 graduate in speech communication. She won the Women's State Oratorical Competition in February and represented Montana in the National Collegiate finals in May. She will continue her education as a teaching assistant in the speech communication department at the University of New Mexico in September.

Peoples, a junior in pre-dentistry, won the National Collegiate Athletic Association Class A handball championship in Knoxville, Tenn., in February. He also won the state open handball tournament in Great Falls earlier this year.

Registrar named

A new registrar and two new department chairmen in the School of Fine Arts have been appointed by President Robert T. Pantzer.

Emma B. Lommasson, assistant registrar at the University for 27 years, is the new registrar, replacing Wayne C. Woolston, who has resigned.

Miska Petersham, chairman of the Kent State University Division of Design and Crafts, Kent, Ohio, has been appointed chairman of the art department, and Donald Simmons, assistant director of the Ohio State University School of Music, Columbus, has been appointed chairman of the music department.

Ms. Lommasson, a native of Sand Coulee, received her bachelor's degree in 1933 and her master's degree in 1939, both from the University of Montana. Prior to her appointment as assistant registrar in 1946, she had worked and taught in the mathematics department for nine years.

Petersham was a member of the School of Art faculty at Kent State University from 1957-61, when he became chairman of the Kent State Division of Design and Crafts.

He has a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the Cleveland Institute of Art and a Master of Fine Arts degree from Syracuse University, Syracuse, N.Y.

Simmons received his doctorate at the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he also earned his Master of Science degree.

Simmons was a member of the Ohio State University music education faculty before being appointed director of the OSU School of Music in 1968.

Two resign from staff

Two University of Montana staff members, Robert R. Fedore, dean of students, and Kenneth M. Fiester, assistant dean of students, have resigned.

Fedore has accepted a position as assistant dean in the College of Osteopathic Medicine, Michigan State University, East Lansing. Fiester will be employed next year by Sentinel High School in Missoula.

Before accepting appointment as dean of students in 1970, Fedore was associate dean of students at Michigan State University and served as associate director of admissions there from 1962-65.

Fiester has served as assistant dean of students since 1971. Before coming to the University he was program assistant for the Office for Student Relations at the University of Colorado, Boulder. He served as head resident adviser for Armstrong Hall, Michigan State University, from 1966-69.

Donations boost drive

The University of Montana Library Book Fund Drive has reached $145,253 with two large donations.

New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller donated his $3,500 honorarium for visiting the campus in April as part of the Mansfield lecture series.

The second annual library kegger held in conjunction with Aber Day May 16 netted $2,051 for the drive. About 4,000 people drank 4,160 gallons of beer at the kegger which was held at Bonner Flats east of Missoula.

The book fund drive was started by the Alumni Association in 1970 to help buy books for the new library.

Holden appointed

University of Montana President Robert T. Pantzer has announced the appointment of Kathleen Fleming Holden as UM Equal Employment Opportunity officer.

The newly created position of Equal Employment Opportunity officer will insure continued implementation of equal employment opportunities on the Missoula campus, Pantzer said.

Ms. Holden, 35, was employed with the U.S. Forest Service Northern Region Office in Missoula from 1963-71. She served in various capacities in the USFS Division of Personnel Management during the eight-year period, including the position of employee development specialist from 1967-71.

She earned her bachelor of science degree in business administration at the University of Montana in 1960.

UM graduates 1,650

About 1,650 graduates and 4,000 families and friends attended the 76th University of Montana commencement in the Harry Adams Field House June 10.

During the exercises, author Dorothy M. Johnson and Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., were awarded honorary doctoral degrees.

President Robert T. Pantzer said in his address to the crowd that education "is our prime hope" for solving many of the problems facing society today.

He said he hopes the new graduates learned while at the University "that the quest for truth, of unquestionable fact, is a continual frustration."

He told the graduates that "your time spent here must have made you fully aware that no person can be fully educated, and thus, that you are challenged to a life of continued learning."

Besides a professional or disciplinary education, Pantzer said, "a determined function of this University has been to prepare you to be inquiring, discerning, flexible individuals—rather than being sightlessly dogmatic."

He said the University "shall always be a place of controversial thought," since such thought is essential in the educational process of a true university.

"The freedom of this campus, directed toward independent thought and unfettered debate, should have enhanced your quality of tolerance—tolerance of the views and attitudes of others," he said.

In a break from tradition, only the doctoral degree recipients walked across the stage to receive their degrees. Pantzer said the new style of commencement was "in the interest of brevity."

Keith McDuffie, commencement marshal, leads the procession at the seventy-sixth annual commencement at the University. McDuffie is chairman of the Faculty Senate and an associate professor of foreign languages.

Dump ground turned into children's park

With $250 and a lot of volunteer help and materials, students in a UM sculpture class and three University of Montana faculty members helped turn a dump ground into a children's playground park.

About three years ago, an area of land adjacent to Rattlesnake Grade School in Missoula was being used for a dump ground for Missoula County. Roy Mix, a janitor at Rattlesnake Grade School, decided it could be used as a park.

It took three years to clear the land with volunteer help from the county, Missoula Technical School students and the Job Corps. During that time the students at Rattlesnake School raised about $7,500 for the park through hot dog sales, carnivals and donations. The money was matched by a grant from the federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

Rudy Autio, professor of art, his wife, Lela, Ted Waddell, assistant professor of art, and the students in a sculpture class Waddell was teaching began building the playground area of the park Spring Quarter.

Ms. Autio said they spent $250 on the playground area, and about $1,000 of donated material and $3,000 of donated labor and equipment were used.

The students built a climbing rope net on logs, a series of platforms and slides, a culvert to climb through, a tire tree to climb and a wooden truck large enough to sit in.

The money from the grant was used to plant two-thirds of the remaining land in grass and to build basketball and tennis courts. One area of the park is flooded for skating in the winter and a building was built for a warming house and storage area.

Officials seek ruling on out-of-state tuition

University officials have requested an opinion from Atty. Gen. Robert L. Woodahl concerning the effect on Montana of a recent Supreme Court ruling on out-of-state tuition.

The Supreme Court ruled, in a 6-3 decision, that state colleges cannot automatically prohibit out-of-state students from establishing legal residence and then qualifying for the lower tuition rates available to state residents.

The University presently charges out-of-state students higher fees. Montana students pay $417 for three academic quarters, but out-of-state students pay $1,318.50, nearly three times as much.

To qualify for the lower resident rates, a student must live in Montana while not attending school for a full year, according to University and state regulations.

The ruling does not eliminate the difference in rates but may affect resident status for students who enter their second and subsequent years of study.

President Robert T. Pantzer said he considers it unlikely that the decision will force the University to change its requirements for residency. If a ruling invalidating the requirements should occur, it could cost the Montana University System as much as $5 million a year.

The Supreme Court decision said that a state university may charge higher tuition to a nonresident student but must change the classification if and when the student can prove he has become a resident.

The ruling was handed down in a case appealed by the state of Connecticut which permanently assigned nonresident status to students who had applied for admission while residing out of the state.

NSYSP is fun, games . . .

About 260 children from low-income families in the Missoula area are participating in the National Summer Youth Sports Program (NSYSP) on the UM campus this summer. The six-week program is sponsored by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and administered through the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Members of the UM athletic department supervise the children in sports activities that include badminton, soccer, tennis, volleyball, football, wrestling, modern dance, gymnastics and swimming from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. weekdays. The program also provides a free hot lunch for each child and bus transportation to and from the campus for those children who live in outlying areas.
